

CONTRIBUTORS

Russell Dynes is Executive Secretary of the American Sociological Association in Washington, D.C. 20036. A founder of the Disaster Research Center, he was its Co-Director from 1963 until the summer of 1977. He is the author of the book, Organized Behavior in Disasters.

Geoffrey Gibson is Associate Director of the Health Services Research and Development Center, John Hopkins Medical Institutions, Baltimore, Maryland 21205. He is the author of numerous publications on emergency medical services and has published "EMS Research: Methodology Development on Substantive Applications" in the Winter 1977 issue of Health Services Research.

Patrick Gurney is a graduate student in sociology at The Ohio State University and is currently working on the role of particular religious institutions in disasters.

Ronald Holloway is Medical Director of the Emergency Care Institute of Beekman Hospital in New York 10038. He served as Director of EMS for New York City, 1968–1976.

Joan Neff is a National Science Foundation fellowship holder in the Department of Sociology at The Ohio State University and is a co-author of the article, "It's a Matter of Myths: An Empirical Examination of Individual Insight Into Disaster Response," Mass Emergencies, 1 (1976) 33–46.

Janet Stroup is a graduate student in the Department of Preventive Medicine at The Ohio State University and is presently conducting research on epidemiological surveys in the health area.

This year, Verta Taylor, an Assistant Professor of Sociology, has assumed the Co-Directorship of the Disaster Research Center, The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio 43201. She is the senior author of The Delivery of Mental Health Services in Disasters: The Xenia Tornado and Some Implications.

Kathleen Tierney is the Field Director of the Disaster Research Center, The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio 43201, and has just completed a monograph on the delivery of crisis intervention services and disaster assistance in rural United States.

Marti Worth is presently working with the Ohio State Department of Mental Health. She recently co-authored, Get to High Ground! The Warning Process in the Colorado Floods: June, 1965.

Joseph Wright, a former Director of Data Analysis, of the Disaster Research Center, is currently Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Hartford, Hartford, Connecticut 06117. He is currently working on a monograph on looting and anti-social behavior in disasters.